

ATA Science and Technology Division

Status Report January 2011

The Science and Technology Division continued to grow in the second half of 2010 and had 483 members at the last count. The division's highlight at the Denver conference was the tour of NIST (National Institute for Standards and Technology). We hope that this year there will be a marked increase in the number of conference sessions in a SciTech track in Boston compared with recent years.

The blog, mailing list and LinkedIn group are all active, with the mailing list having the highest number of active contributors, and the blog has a number of great articles posted. We are pleased with an increasing number of division members showing interest in writing.

S&TD has been selected as one of the model divisions for the new Leadership Council system. We (the administrator and assistant administrator) are currently defining our plan to implement this system and to invite members to join us on the Leadership Council. We expect the Council to be up and running by February 2011 and to report how it went and how the Council is functioning at the Division Administrators Summit in April.
